What type of change projects can be satisfactorily implemented when staff work on a hybrid basis?

Any change can be delivered successfully in a hybrid model

Any with correct communication

Less so when team is not so well established.

Any. Its not stopped us implementing.

I believe all sorts, provided tech is efficient and people know what is expected.

Any

Any, just need to dial up the change management

More straightforward business processes.
Preparation is key.

What types of change projects (or parts of the change project) are more difficult or slower to implement when your colleagues are either home or hybrid working?

---

New product/Tech training

New strategic type projects where project would benefit from direct engagement / communications.

Brainstorming ideas and or issue resolution

Making the initial case for change and communicating with the change champions

Organisational change particularly if it involves onboarding new teams

Cultural, TOM, org change require more engagement

Ones that require intense collaboration - white boarding ideas etc

Engagement/ comms if not managed appropriately

New application where more training is needed

Organisational change

More strategic larger change programs
